Bogota, January 19th, 2017

After almost two months of starting operations and thanks to the warm welcome given by Latin Americans, Wingo announces a new route to fly well at low price. From February 23, the carrier will connect the historic city of Cartagena de Indias with Panama, one of the most appreciated tourist and business destinations among Colombians. Roundtrip tickets will be available at just USD $173, from Cartagena, and USD $159, from Panama –all taxes included. These fares are 30% below current market prices.

Cartagena is very important for Wingo! With this new addition, Wingo already offers three destinations departing from La Heroica (The Heroic, Cartagena's nickname): Bogota, San Andres and Panama. From Panama, Wingo already flies to Bogota, Medellin, Cali, Cartagena and San Jose, Costa Rica.

Initially, Wingo will start at two times per week –Mondays and Thursdays, connecting Cartagena's Rafael Núñez International Airport with Panama Pacifico International Airport, located 15 minutes from Panama City's downtown, 30 minutes from the Pacific coast and 1 hour from the Colón Free Trade Zone. Wingo will be the only airline flying to this airport from Cartagena. Flights will depart from Cartagena at 4:20 pm and arrive in Panama at 5:33 pm, while flights originating in Panama will depart at 2:00 pm and arrive in Cartagena at 3:13 pm. More than 2,000 monthly seats have been made available for this route.

This is the perfect opportunity for more Cartageneros to travel abroad for the first time and seal their passports without complications and without spending too much –or even to repeat that holiday or business trip to charming Panama. Wingo will now take Cartageneros to the continent's best shopping center, to the impressive Panama Canal,
